JODY FIERZ INTERIOR DESIGN WITH DOYLE COFFIN ARCHITECTURE

Call it a culinary miracle that the homeowners can tear their eyes away from the views of both the lake and those showstopping ceilings in this kitchen and get any cooking done. Here, subtlety sings in an open and airy transitional space that also encompasses the dining room and mixes in natural components like wood and the engineered stone of the island. The luxe lake house look owes much to the palette of white walls, the translucent light blue glass subway tiles and the abundance of windows. Walnut beams and the Jayhawk paneled ceiling add rich depth and texture without feeling too rustic. A cozy banquette, with a walnut tabletop to match the nearby butcher block, beckons for breakfast, while the simple pendant light fixtures above the island don't distract from those sweeping lake views just outside.
